

INTRODUCTION

The movement to unite people was established in 1998 as a peace oriented non-governmental organisation. The Organisation initiated a peaceful disarmament of combatants in Portloko district which became on-going in some other areas in Sierra Leone. Advocated the release of child combatants, freedom of civilians in rebel held territories, interfaced with the government of President Tejan Kabbah, United Nations Observer Mission, Ecomog Peace Keeping force, Parliament and AFRC/RUF combatants. These interactions mapped the gateway for the signing of the Lome Peace accord in 1999.

The Movement to Unite People then conducted a peace tour in rebel held territories, aiding implementation of the Lome Peace accord in Sierra Leone.

The war ended, members have now decided to transition into a another phase as Sierra Patriots to sustain peace, promote humanity, freedom of speech, justice for all, democracy, good governance and sustainable human development.
